Enchanting towns and villages, breath-taking landscapes, a spectacular array of unique flora, and delicious local wines are awaiting your discovery on a cruise to the Portuguese islands of Madeira.

Arrecife de Lanzarote, Spain

A geological wonder and well-loved jewel of the Spanish Canary Islands, the port city of Arrecife lies on the east coast of Lanzarote, just 78 miles off the North coast of Africa. Offering a dry, sunny, climate with little rain, the island has long been a popular port of call for guests sailing on a cruise to the Canary Islands, as well as cruises to the Mediterranean.

Gran Canaria, Spain

With sandy beaches, inviting taverns, and picturesque villages, set against a dramatic volcanic backdrop, Gran Canaria is a destination filled with unique sights and experiences. Its capital city, Las Palmas, sits on the northwest of the island and regularly welcomes cruise guests from around the world.

Tenerife, Spain

Nestled in a natural harbor on the northeast coast of the island, the port sits less than a kilometer from the main town square. Its location makes it easy to branch off and experience the wonders that the island of Tenerife has to offer. The port has an enchanting presence in itself too. It's full of brightly painted buildings and rich, historical architecture, as well as plentiful shops, restaurants, and cafes.

La Coruña, Spain

Nestled along the northwest coast of Spain, La Coruna is a relatively hidden gem compared to cities such as Madrid or Barcelona, yet it offers an unmistakably traditional and understated Spanish charm. Renowned for its artistic history and glass balconies, a port call here offers the chance to follow in the footsteps of Picasso, drink in the dramatically beautiful coastline, and stroll through historic streets peppered with awe-inspiring architectural wonders.

Southampton, England

Located in the picturesque English county of Hampshire, Southampton is a vibrant waterfront city, serviced by direct trains to London, an airport, and an international cruise terminal.
