Edinburgh, Scotland

Like much of Scotland, Edinburgh is a beautiful region shrouded in myth, mystery, and ancient history. Pale stone monuments. Crooked cobbled streets. Views out to the moody Firth of Forth estuary. On a visit to Scotland's bewitching capital, discover a fascinating atmosphere which will leave you wanting more.

Stornoway, Scotland

Cruise to Stornoway and you will see one of the most scenic natural harbors in the Outer Hebrides. On the Isle of Lewis the town has earned its reputation for having a welcoming port. Deep and sheltered, it justifies its name, which means "steering bay." The pier was built on the original site of Stornoway Castle, which was destroyed by Cromwell's forces in 1653.

Isle of Mull, United Kingdom

The sight of the island is dominated by the Mull mountains: a beautiful combination of gray granite and green slopes. Small coastal towns can be seen from the ocean, most notably the colorful seafront houses of Tobermory, made famous by the CBBC series Balamory. The coastline varies from flat, sandy beaches to sheer rocky cliffs.

Liverpool, England

Liverpool and its port was once home of Cunard Line. The Cunard Building, Royal Liver Building, and the Port of Liverpool Building, all on Pier Head, are often described as the city's "Three Graces." Liverpool is vibrant and modern, but with a taste of the '60s. Take a ferry across the Mersey for some great harbor views, or a Magical Mystery Tour of the city, commemorating The Beatles.

Cork, Ireland

Cobh is a charming seaside town built on a steep hill on the Great Island in Cork's natural harbor. When you cruise to Cobh you berth only 200 yards from the center of town so it's a great place to step off the ship straight into the warm ambience of Ireland. There are countless sights of historical interest and importance, such as the Fota House, Arboretum and Gardens located nearby.

Southampton, England

Located in the picturesque English county of Hampshire, Southampton is a vibrant waterfront city, serviced by direct trains to London, an airport, and an international cruise terminal. Explore the city's maritime heritage and links to RMS Titanic in the Sea City Museum, see contemporary British art in the Cultural Quarter, or walk the medieval walls in the Old Town, paying a visit to the Tudor House and Garden.
